

The US Constitutional Flag

In Chapter 15 of 'The Secret Destiny of America' it speaks of the Unknown man who helped Design the American Colonial Flag. While space here is limited, a focus of intent is being invited, that while the American Flag is America's 'Sun of the Firmament' of its own borders, so too are the 'Suns of the Firmaments' of All other World Nations. Such Suns can Illuminate and Foster Patriotism, Worth and Justifications for national life purpose, giving meaning to that peculiar way of being. (Meaning in this use of the word 'peculiar' is in terms of God's Vision for Humanity). But Imagine, Sense or Feel, that behind each Sun, just as our Solar Sun has behind It, the Great Central Sun of this Universe, a Greater Constant and Countenance that Burns the Light of a Thousand Suns, Destined to Merge, Fuse and Unite all the Symbolism, Representations and Allegories of Designs, Colours, Qualities and Virtues, that will Unite All Men and Women of All Nations into One Heart and One Mind, in Peace, Liberty, Justice, and a greater Quality of Life and Freedom of Spirit.

Manly Hall, shares: "Our flag was worked out in elements of design that provided for gradual modification in the future as the national destiny increased. It was a learned stranger, added by seeming accident to the committee appointed by the Colonial Congress in 1775, who had the foresight to provide the area for the stars in subsequent substitution for the British Union Jack. The design was adopted by General Washington; there is no record that the committee ever made a report to Congress. ... The book that tells of the presence of the unknown designer ends with a quotation from Bacon.

"Robert Allen Campbell in 1890 published a little book 'Our Flag', or 'The Evolution of the Stars and Stripes'. Diligent research fails to uncover any data about Mr. Campbell. He states in his preface that the work is 'a compilation of facts and dates from official sources, larger works, occasional pamphlets and addresses upon this and collateral subjects; and is meant, therefore, for the perusal of those who have not the time, opportunity or disposition for a more extended study in this line of research.'

"Then he refers specifically to the chapter of interest to our present consideration: 'That part of this sketch which treats of the proceedings of the Congressional Committee in relation to the Colonial Flag, and of the unofficial consideration, by a few of our Revolutionary statesmen and heroes, in regard to the Flag of the Thirteen United States,' immediately preceding its adoption by Congress, has not heretofore been published.'

"This last statement makes it extremely difficult to trace Mr. Campbell's source of information. We are forced to the conclusion that the story must have been given to him by word of mouth.

The book itself must have been printed in a very small edition, for it has become exceedingly scarce and is seldom if ever offered for sale. On those rare occasions when copies have changed hands, the book commands a price far in excess of usual works in this field.

"According to the rules laid down by Sir Francis Bacon for works published under the authority of the 'Society of unknown Philosophers', each book must be marked in some peculiar way, easily recognizable by the informed, but not conspicuous to those who are not a party to the plan. All of the older writings are so marked, either with ciphers, curious headpieces, vignettes, colophons, designs, symbols, figures, or signatures. It is possible that the book, 'Our Flag' carries such a signature; for it ends with the following quotation, 'Out of monuments, names, words, proverbs, private records and evidence, fragments of stories, passages in books, and the like, we save and recover somewhat from the deluge of time.' Francis Bacon.

"One thing is certain; Robert Allen Campbell has concluded his treatise with a curiously meaningful passage from the writings of the man responsible for the broad program of colonization in the western world that made possible the creation of the United States of America. The selection of Bacon's words to conclude the book may be an accident, and it may be intent; but in the light of the text and the air of mystery which covers the history of the writing and the life of the author, it appears more than possible that intent is the answer. End first Excerpt.

“After a preamble, the Professor made the following extraordinary remarks:

‘The sun of our political air, like the sun in the heavens, is very low in the horizon, just now approaching the winter solstice, which it will reach very soon. But, as the sun rises from his grave in Capricorn, mounts toward his resurrection in Aries, and passes onward and upward to his glorious culmination in Cancer, so will our political sun rise and continue to increase in power, in light, and in glory; and the exalted sun of summer will not have gained his full strength of heat and power in the starry Lion until our Colonial Sun will be, in its glorious exaltation, demanding a place in the governmental firmaments alongside of, coordinate with, and in no wise subordinate to, any other sun of any other nation upon earth.’

“The Professor went on to point out that the flag which he recommended would be subject to change in the future as the national destiny increased. This change, however, should not require a complete re-designing but a process of gradual modification: ‘To make it announce and represent the new nation which is already gestating in the womb of time; and which will come to birth, and that not prematurely, but fully developed and ready for the change into independent life, before the sun in its next summer's strength ripens our next harvest.’

“The design finally submitted consisted of a field of thirteen alternate red and white stripes, and in the area which now contains the stars was the British Union Jack. The area containing the Union Jack was the one suitable for modification. The design was formally and unanimously accepted, and the flag was adopted by General Washington as the recognized standard of the Colonial Army and Navy.

“On January 2, 1776, at Cambridge, in the presence of the Army, General Washington with his own hands raised the newly made flag on a tall and specially prepared pine tree liberty pole. The British army at Charleston Heights could see the flag clearly. After inspecting it with their field glasses, the British officers ordered a salute of thirteen cheers, followed by a regular official salute of thirteen guns in honour of the new standard. It appears therefore, that the Colonial Flag was as pleasing to the British as it was to the Colonies.

“It is easy to see why Mr. Campbell's story has received very little recorded recognition. It belongs among those shadowy and mysterious happenings which influence or change the course of empire but will ever find little favour with prosaic and unimaginative historians. End Excerpt.

Since the Original US Flag's design, it has changed 27 times in its lifetime of 248 years, so would it be inconceivable, in Light of the Unseen and Unknowable Truths that are now beginning to surface for all humanity to finally become aware of, to foresee for the present US Flag, like the Great Seal regarding the Eagle and Phoenix, one final change to Align it too, a Greater Democratic Function and Purpose where all 50 United States, come under a single United Sun of the Firmament Forcefield of Love, Liberty, Justice, and Freedom for All, under an Egalitarian ‘We The Peoples’ ‘Good Will’, ‘the Good To Do’ and the ‘Good To Be’, In God's Name, showing Solidarity toward other Nations to follow a Compassionate and Heart Felt Transition from National Independence to a Global Democratic Commonwealth of Nations or the ‘I AM’ One World Nation?
